REVIVAL SERVICES LARGELY ATTENDED

Entering Second Week of the Methodist Meeting. Rev. Fain's Sermons are Forceful and Impressive. Good Music Has Added to the Services.

In spite of April showers and the cold weather which so often proves a barrier to the would be church goers, the attendance during the past week at the Methodist revival services has been unusually large. In fact every evening save one the auditorium and Sunday school room have been comfortably filled.

The meeting which opened Sunday April 21, will continue through this week and probably close Sunday unless otherwise announced. On Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Fain preached especially to the young people and children and Thursday afternoon he will hold a meeting for the older folks.

Rev. Fain is not an evangelist but a pastor of a mission church in Paducah, Ky. He is a consecrated young minister, possessing a personality that is pleasing to his hearers and he preaches the gospel in such an impressive and forceful manner that any one with an open heart and mind could not help but believe in the Creator and His love.

Another feature which has added greatly to the meeting is the music. Mr. Reynolds of Greenville who is the song leader and well known throughout Kentucky has organized a Junior choir for the time being and with the assistance of the Senior choir, the singing has been very much appreciated. Mr. Reynolds has a special musical number for each service.

CLOVERPORTERS CONVINCED FOOD WILL WIN THE WAR

After Hearing T. R. Moss of Food Administration Lecture. Says England Has 900 Food Laws.

One of the most interesting and intelligent war lectures that the people of Cloverport have been privileged to hear so far was the one delivered last Wednesday afternoon at the American Theatre by Mr. T. R. Moss of the U. S. Food Administration of Kentucky. Mr. Moss being a most fluent speaker and well informed on the war situation in general proved entertaining to his audience, and there was one thing he left deeply impressed upon their minds and it was that "Food Will Win the War." Your million men, your Liberty Bonds, your Red Cross Societies and all else you may have will not win the war unless there is food enough," said he. "Our American soldiers and Allies must be fed."

Mr. Moss compared the food situation in this country to that of the allies. In England, he said, "they have 900 food laws and if people do not obey these laws they are subject to a heavy fine." He told of one man who was fined because a few pieces of stale bread had been found in his hog pen. He urged that the women not to be just signers of the food pledge cards but doers as well and he further stated that a record was kept of all those who failed to do so, rigid investigations were going to be made very soon to find out why they did not sign them.

While in this city Mr. Moss was entertained for luncheon by Miss Elizabeth Skillman who is the assistant County Chairman of the Food Administration Bureau, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Skillman. He left immediately after the speaking for Hardinsburg accompanied by the County Chairman, Russell Compton.

$100 COMMUNITY BOND FOR C. H. S.

Subscribed by Patriotic Citizens and School Children. Lively Solicitors Have Collected All Save $24.

A most patriotic and beneficial act which has been done for the future welfare of the Cloverport Public School is the $100 Community or Liberty Bond that has been subscribed by the citizens and school children of Cloverport. The $100 plus the interest will be due the school in ten years to be used wherever it is needed most. It will truly be a Community Bond for it is safe to say that very few persons have missed being asked for a small donation by the lively and untiring solicitors who were appointed by the local chairman of the Liberty Loan sales department.

The school children have been especially interested in the bond. Each grade has donated so many dozen eggs which in turn sold to the merchants and the cash applied to the bond. Up to date the committee has collected $76 and the members are quite confident that they will get the remaining $24 before the Third Liberty Loan Drive closes.

The solicitors who deserve so much credit are: Misses Mary Owen Oelze, Edith Burn, Grace Pauley, Louise Whitehead, Emily Reid, Louise Nicholas, Lida Mae English, Mary Christina Hamman, Eleanor Reid and Eva Jolly.

HUNS ARE HELD AT ALL POINTS

Foe Is Beaten Back Near Ypres; French Troops Retake Positions.

PETAIN REGAINS VITAL LINE

Hundreds of Germans Are Captured by the British in Big Battle at Voormezeele, Two Miles South of Goal.

London, April 29.—The French have recaptured positions from Loere to La Clyte, in Flanders, west of Mount Kemmel, it is announced officially. The fighting on the Flanders front north of the Lys was very severe. The enemy's advance was held at all points. Heavy losses were inflicted on the Germans.

Continuing their counter-attacks on the front east of Amiens the allies have gained further advantages in the Haugard-Villers-Bretonneux sector.

The Germans made a heavy attack on the front south of Ypres. There was a long battle for Voormezeele, two miles south of Ypres, which the British retained, taking hundreds of prisoners.

French Stop Attack.

Paris, April 29.—A German attack near Thennes, on the front southeast of Amiens, was broken at night, the war office announces. Artillery fighting continues on the front between Villers-Bretonneux and Haugard.

Fighting Is Desperate.

Fighting of the most desperate character attends the German attempt to enlarge on the capture of Mont Kemmel, on the Flanders front, as the Franco-British troops strive to hold the enemy in check. On the vital sector of the Picardy front east of Amiens the allied soldiers have driven the Germans from more of the ground they gained earlier in the week.

The fall of Mont Kemmel is a serious blow to the security of the salient about Ypres, but to gain a complete victory there the Germans must strike quickly. This they are trying to do, while the allied troops resist strenuously. While Kemmel's capture by the enemy does not mean the immediate evacuation of Ypres, military observers say, it does menace the British positions there, and a further retirement in the next few days is not unlikely.

Southwest of Ypres the Germans are now on a line running from the northwest of Bailloul through Loere to La Clyte and eastward to the Ypres-Comines canal. Field Marshal Haig admits a retirement along the canal and Berlin claims the occupation of St. Eloi, two and one-half miles south of Ypres.

Terrific Fight at Kemmel.

Kemmel hill did not fall without a struggle, and it remains a monument to the bravery of a French regiment, which was cut off from the allied line, but held out until surrounded on all sides by the Germans. The ultimate fate of the French defenders, fighting tremendous odds, is not known to the allies. Franco-British troops attempted strong counter-attacks to retake the hill, but were driven back by the Germans, who are using nine divisions, 180,000 men, on a front of about eight miles.

The German attack in the north, unless it can gather much greater momentum, does not yet threaten the Belgian line from Dixmude to the sea, although it does affect the British about Ypres.

The enemy must advance still farther before the Belgians will be compelled to give up the historic line of the Yser, which they have held for so many months.

Successes were gained by allied troops in a counter-attack south of the Somme from Villers-Bretonneux to south of Haugard.

German Officers Chagrined.

With the British Army in France, April 29.—Among the prisoners captured near Villers-Bretonneux were several young officers who gave their opinion of things in general with refreshing candor. They were chagrined at the disce which the Germans had made of the Villers-Bretonneux affair. Some had unkind things to say of the higher command.

A large part of their trouble the officers laid to the fact that the British held a hill north of the village which gave the defenders full observation on the Germans for many miles. This hill, known as hill 191, lies close to the front line and commands a wide sweep of country. From it the British gunners have played havoc with the German troops and transports.

The prisoners said that for three days prior to the attack they had virtually nothing to eat because the food trains were smashed by shell fire and kitchens which tried to cook what food there was on hand were continually being demolished. As a result the Germans had little love for their task when the time came to attack.

The Germans were more or less buoyed up, however, by the promise of great things from the tanks which had not yet been seen in action.

A British officer, in talking with one of the young German lieutenants, asked the latter to explain why the German submarines had sunk only one American transport.

"That is what we would like to know," the youngster replied.

ANNIE LAURIE REAL PERSON

American Girl of Same "Ilk" Gives Facts of Origin of the Popular Scotch Song.

More than once has the question as to whether Annie Laurie, the subject of the ever-popular and ever-living song bearing her name as title, was a real person or mere fiction.

A letter has come to hand that was written by Miss M. E. Riddle, daughter of the late Judge Riddle, for many years a circuit court justice in this section, says a writer in the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times. The Riddles were of Laurie ilk, as Scotch folk say, and they had gone to some considerable pains to get the story of the song straight, as there had been considerable contention about it. Here it is:

"Jeann Riddle (the name later spelled Riddle) was married to Sir Robert Laurie, the first baronet of Maxwellton. One of their daughters was Annie Laurie, celebrated in Scotch song.

"Annie Laurie was famed for her beauty and cleverness, and was a social favorite in all the country round about, so it was not at all surprising that she captivated a Mr. Douglas of England, a man of culture and of letters, who composed the song bearing her name.

"But seeing that the course of true love does not run smoothly, she married a Mr. Gurgesson, leaving Mr. Douglas to his hunting and his verses.

"To this day many pilgrims go to Maxwellton, drawn thither by the much-loved song, 'Annie Laurie.' Many also visit Craigdoroch, where she spent her married life in comfort."

WARY OLD BIRD IS TRUTH

Fact Worth Remembering When One Is Tempted to Criticize Errors Seen in Newspapers.

"Where do you get the absurd facts you print?" is a favorite query put to newspaper men. In the view of these cynics, newspapers spend most of their time misspelling names, misquoting incidents that never happened, and generally manhandling life as it is led.

There is just one answer to be made to the query above, and that is: "Newspapers get such of their facts as are absurd from the absurd human beings who for one reason or a thousand refuse to relate facts accurately." Newspapers, truth-telling newspapers, spend a very large part of their time correcting these misstatements, running them to their source, and getting at the truth. A certain proportion of error gets by—not as great a proportion as can be heard in any village neighborhood gossip, for it is the concern of newspapers—of honest ones, that is—to allow for errors and correct them, whereas it is the concern of those other purveyors of news, gossips, to create errors whenever they are more interesting than the truth.

The next time you find an error in your favorite newspaper, try an experiment. Try to capture one small fact yourself, in your own home town. You will quickly discover just how wary a bird the truth is and how very unpopular.—New York Tribune.

Japanese Arts and Letters.

The Yumato association has been formed by distinguished Japanese citizens for the purpose of making Nippon's achievements in arts and letters better known to the western world. Its promoters believe that Japanese civilization is not correctly understood by the vast majority of Occidental people. Her naval, military and scientific advancement is recognized, but the West has yet to comprehend the significance of her achievements in the humanities. The Japan Magazine, commenting upon the new organization, says: "Many foreigners are disposed to look upon Japan as merely a military nation, whereas her most important side is the genius of her unique civilization and character. If people could get a glimpse of the soul of Japan they would have quite a different opinion of her. This can best be had from Japanese art and literature, which in many ways are equal to those of the West. Even those Occidentals who try to appreciate Japanese art prefer the least representative art of the nation. And as for Japanese literature, it is practically unknown among western people."

The association will publish works on Japanese history, literature and art and make translations into European languages of the best works of Japanese writers, ancient and modern; in addition its endeavor will be to promote the improvement of the national music and drama.

Glass Industry in America.

Glass was first manufactured in America by the people of Jamestown, Va., during the year 1615. Commenting on this fact, John Smith lamented that "the labor of the colony has been misdirected in the manufacture of ashes, soap, glass and tar, in which they could by no means compete with Sweden or Russia." The inhabitants of Jamestown did not agree with this view, however, and soon afterward commenced the erection of a glass works, the completion of which was interrupted by the Indian massacre of 1622. The first glass factory in North America to attempt the industry on an ambitious scale was built in 1780, at Temple, N. H., by Robert Hewes of Boston. The workmen, 32 in number, were German deserters from the British army. The carelessness of a workman caused the destruction of the plant by fire in 1781. In 1803 a glass factory was established in Boston, and since that time the industry has flourished.

AMERICANS WIN THE WAR CROSS

Eleven Ambulance Men Cited for Gallant Work in Great Clash.

DUTY DONE UNDER HEAVY FIRE

Germany to Publish the Names of the 183 U. S. Prisoners Taken in the Battle of Seicheprey, in St. Mihiel Sector.

Paris, April 29.—Eleven American ambulance men have won the war cross by gallant services performed in the battle now in progress.

Lieut. Ralph Richmond, commanding Section 642, with Sergt. Julius Beebe, G. I. Harris, Henry K. James, E. A. Littlefield and John J. Frennig, were cited in eulogistic terms for carrying away wounded men from positions right up against the enemy's lines under the heaviest fire.

Charles A. Reed of Section 525; Henry W. Holman, Johnson N. Hunsberger, Jr., and Holbert S. Purycki of Section 591, and Jesse M. Bazby of Section 591 were cited in regimental orders for courage displayed on April 6.

Berlin to Tell Names of the 183. Amsterdam, April 29.—A Berlin dispatch says that the names of the 183 Americans whom the Germans report they captured in the recent battle of Seicheprey, in the St. Mihiel sector, will be published in the Gazette Des Ardennes, a German propaganda organ published in French. This will be done, the dispatch says, because doubts have been expressed outside of Germany that prisoners in such number were taken.

England Would Greet U. S. Boys.

London, April 29.—For a long time there has been a feeling of regret throughout England that such American troops as land on British soil arrive without the British public being permitted to give them any sort of welcome or friendly greeting. This has been largely due to the fact that the American authorities would not permit any advance information of times or places of landing.

"Soldiers arriving after a long, hard ocean voyage must have often felt there was something chilly about their landing," said a prominent British officer to an Associated Press correspondent, "and we are going to find some way to remedy this."

FRENCH MEATLESS AIDS U. S.

Necessity of Feeding Part of American Army Cause of Rule—Reserves Dwindle.

Paris, April 29.—The introduction of a system of three meatless days a week is announced in an official note. It is explained that the gradually dwindling reserves of frozen meat, the necessity of feeding part of the American army and occasionally of supplying the wants of other allies force the government to draw more and more on French cattle stocks.

Unscrupulous intermediaries operating in local markets, the note says, have taken advantage of these circumstances to run up prices, with the result that the raisers keep back the best animals from the requisitioning officers. These speculators, some of whom realize a profit of 900 francs ($180) on one steer, according to the statement, will be prosecuted vigorously.

5,236 'OBJECTORS' IN BRITAIN

Report Shows Total of the Refractory Cases Dealt With Since the War Began.

London, April 29.—A report on punishments inflicted on refractory conscientious objectors in Great Britain shows that 5,236 such cases have been dealt with during the period of the war, including 4,680 cases of court-martial for refusal to obey orders. Seventy-two objectors have served sentences of two years' hard labor.

Escaping Convict Kills "Trusty."

Little Rock, Ark., April 29.—Carl Lewis and another convict, whose name the prison authorities would not reveal, attempted to escape from the state convict farm and in an exchange of pistol shots with other convicts acting as guards Henry Palmer of Hope, Ark., a prisoner serving two years for larceny, was killed. Lewis was tried on a charge of first-degree murder.

'HOLD, WE'LL WIN'—HAIG

British Chief Says Each One Must Fight On to the End.

Army Told That Victory Will Belong to the Side Which Holds Out the Longest.

London, April 15.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, in a special order of the day addressed to "all ranks of the British army in France and Flanders," says:

"Three weeks ago today the enemy began his terrific attacks against us on a 50-mile front. His objects are to separate us from the French, to take the channel ports and to destroy the British army."

"In spite of throwing already 100 divisions into the battle and enduring the most reckless sacrifice of human life, he has yet made little progress toward his goals."

"We owe this to the determined fighting and self-sacrifice of our troops. Words fail me to express the admiration which I feel for the splendid resistance offered by all ranks of our army under the most trying circumstances."

"Many among us now are tired. To those I would say that victory will belong to the side which holds out the longest. The French army is moving rapidly and in great force to our support. There is no other course open to us but to fight it out."

"Every position must be held to the last man. There must be no retirement. With our backs to the wall and believing in the justice of our cause, each one of us must fight to the end."

"The safety of our homes and the freedom of mankind depend alike upon the conduct of each one of us at this critical moment."

How Tornado Originates.

The tornado of the Western plains is identical in formation with the sand-whirl. The sun bents fiercely on a limited area—say ten square miles of barren prairie—and as a result the air next the earth becomes very hot, perhaps 120 degrees, and the mass is constantly increasing in volume. Above the warm air is a stratum perhaps 20 degrees colder.

By and by a passageway is made, the hot air begins to ascend and the cold upper air, pressing downward, forces the lighter air through a channel thus formed. It begins to whirl, it increases in velocity, a surface current forces it along, and the tornado starts on its destructive journey.

The terrific cyclone originates in much the same way, only differing in extent. The most violent cyclones originate in tropical latitudes, in the Atlantic ocean, to the north and east of West Indian Islands and in the Pacific, in the China sea and in the neighborhood of the Philippine Islands.

The reason they are so destructive is because they are carried such great distances by extraneous influences.

Sheep Has Wooden Leg.

Charles Krauter, living near Bucyrus, O., had a lamb get tangled up in a fence and injure its leg. The veterinarian told him the leg had to come off. Krauter did not want to lose the lamb, so he had the leg he nursed it back to health and then fixed up a peg leg for it.

Now the lamb has grown to be a sheep and still stumps around on the wooden leg. Occasionally the wooden member becomes loose and falls off, and the sheep then hobbles over to a soft spot and waits until some one comes along to fasten the leg on again.

The wooden leg doesn't interfere with the sheep growing wool, Mr. Krauter says, and wool is wool nowadays.

Military Necessity Calls for Greater Sacrifice Here—Allied War
Bread Must Be Maintained—Our Soldiers and Sailors to Have Full Allowance.

If we are to furnish the Allies with the necessary proportion of wheat to maintain their war bread from now until the next harvest, and this is a military necessity, we must reduce our monthly consumption to 21,000,000 bushels a month, as against our normal consumption of about 42,000,000 bushels, or 50 per cent. of our normal consumption. This is the situation as set forth by the U. S. Food Administration at Washington. Reserving a margin for distribution to the army and for special cases, leaves for general consumption approximately 1½ pounds of wheat products weekly per person. The Food Administration's statement continues: Many of our consumers are dependent upon bakers' bread. Such bread must be durable and therefore, requires a larger proportion of wheat products than cereal breads baked in the household. Our army and navy require a full allowance. The well-to-do in our population can make greater sacrifices in the consumption of wheat products than can the poor. In addition, our population in the agricultural districts, where the other cereals are abundant, are more skilled in the preparation of breads from these other cereals than the crowded city and industrial populations.

With improved transportation conditions we now have available a surplus of potatoes. We also have in the spring months a surplus of milk, and we have ample corn and oats for human consumption. The drain on rye and barley, as substitutes, has already greatly exhausted the supply of these grains.

To effect the needed saving of wheat, the average monthly amount purchased in the four months prior to March 1.

5. Manufacturers using wheat products for non-food purposes should cease such use entirely.

6. There is no limit upon the use of other cereals, flours, and meals, corn, barley, buckwheat, potato flour, etc. cetera.

Many thousand families throughout the land are now using no wheat products whatever, except a very small amount for cooking purposes, and are doing so in perfect health and satisfaction. There is no reason why all of the American people who are able to cook in their own households cannot subsist perfectly well with the use of less wheat products than one and one-half pounds a week, and we specially ask the well-to-do households in the country to follow this additional program in order that we may provide the necessary marginal supplies for those parts of the community less able to adapt themselves to so large a proportion of substitutes.

In order that we shall be able to make the wheat exports that are absolutely demanded of us to maintain the civil population and soldiers of the allies and our own army, we propose to supplement the voluntary co-operation of the public by a further limitation of distribution, and we shall place at once restrictions on distribution which will be adjusted from time to time to secure as nearly equitable distribution as possible. With the arrival of harvest we should be able to relax such restrictions. Until then we ask for the necessary patience, sacrifice and co-operation of the distributing trades.

A Business Should be as Big as Its Job

If bigness is of benefit to the public it should be commended.

The size of a business depends upon the needs which that business is called upon to serve. A business should be as big as its job. You do not drive tacks with a pile-driver—or piles with a tack-hammer.

Swift & Company's growth has been the natural and inevitable result of national and international needs.

Large-scale production and distribution are necessary to convert the live stock of the West into meat and by-products, and to distribute them over long distances to the consuming centers of the East and abroad.

Only an organization like that of Swift & Company, with its many packing plants, hundreds of distributing houses, and thousands of refrigerator cars, would have been able to handle the varying seasonal supplies of live stock and meet the present war emergency by supplying, without interruption:

First—The U. S. soldiers and the Allies in Europe by shipping as much as 800 carloads of meat products in a single week!

Second—The cantonments in the United States.

Third—The retailers upon whom the American public depends for its daily supply of meat.

But many people ask—Do producers and consumers pay too much for the complex service rendered?

Everyone, we believe, concedes the efficiency of the Swift & Company organization—in performing a big job in a big way at a minimum of expense.

Swift & Company's total profit in 1917 was less than 4 cents on each dollar of sales of meat and by-products. Elimination of this profit would have had practically no effect on live stock and meat prices.

Do you believe that this service can be rendered for less by any other conceivable method of organization or operation?

These questions and others are answered fully and frankly in the Swift & Company 1918 Year Book sent free on request.

EVERYONE MUST HELP.

Wars cannot be fought without money, and upon the Treasury centers every financial demand upon the Nation.
The rich of this country cannot alone meet the needs of the Nation; the men of the country cannot do it alone; the women of the country cannot do it alone; but all of us, the people of the United States, disregarding partisanship, forgetting selfish interests, thinking only of the supremacy of right and determining to vindicate the majesty of American ideals and secure the safety of America and civilization, can do the great and splendid work which God has called upon us to do.

W. G. McADOO,
Secretary of the Treasury.

JUDGE PAYNE URGES THE CO-OPERATION OF THE CITIZENS OF BRECKENRIDGE COUNTY IN THE GO TO SUNDAY-SCHOOL MOVEMENT

Recognizing that the supreme need of our county at this time is that its citizens should have the highest type of Christian character and training, and that we ought to put forth our best moral and religious efforts in order to stamp out evil and establish universal peace at home, with God as our guide.

Whereas the Sunday-School is one of the most powerful factors in character building, and realizing that so large a number of our people are missing the influence and training of this great institution, I heartily commend and endorse the action of the Kentucky Sunday-School Association in appointing May 5, 1918, as a Go-To-Sunday-School-Day in Kentucky.

Therefore, I, S. B. Payne, County Judge of Breckinridge county, State of Kentucky, call upon all of our citizens to co-operate heartily in this movement, and request each person in the county to attend Sunday-School on May 5, 1918.

Yours for success,

S. B. Payne, J. B. C. C.

This the 4th day of April, 1918.

In Memoriam.

On April, 16, God gave to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Ballman, a dear little baby boy who they named Aloysius. And "Love the fairest of all gifts" was lavished upon this dear little babe by fond parents and delighted brothers and sisters.

But alas! "God's ways are not our ways," and their joy was soon turned to sorrow, when on April 26 death claimed their precious babe. The little innocent soul went home to God and the body was laid away in the St. Rose cemetery on the following day.

Go to Sunday School Day.

Sunday, May 5, is the day agreed upon by the Sunday school organization of Kentucky as Go To Sunday School Day.

We are making a special effort in Breckinridge county to get every man, woman, boy and girl to Sunday school on that day. Not on that day only but, that they may become members and regular attendants of some Sunday school.

We feel that in all times of the World's History, never have we needed help and guidance of the Lord more than at this particular time. With the Great World's Crisis upon us and the Barbarous Hun doing everything in his power to blot out the Christian church.

So let's join hearts and hands in this great work, and invite our neighbors and friends to meet us at Sunday school on May 5.

The offering on that day will go to the State Work and will be the only contribution for the year asked of the schools by the State organization so we should like to make it as liberal as we feel we can.

M. Lyddan,
Pres. of County S. S. Organization.

"I wish I might have a dog," observed Prince Ferdinand William Otto. Fortunately, at that moment, Hedwig came in. She came in a trifle defiantly, although that passed unnoticed, and she also came unannounced, as was her constant privilege. And she stood inside the door and stared at the prince. "Well!" she said. "Is there to be no riding lesson today?"

"I don't know, Nikky has not come."

"Where is he?" Here the drop of nicotine got in its deadly work. "I'm afraid he is ill," said Prince Ferdinand William Otto. "He said he smoked too many cigarettes, and—"

"Is Captain Larisch ill?" Hedwig looked at the governess, and lost some of her bright color.

Miss Braithwaite did not know, and said so. "At the very least," she went on, "he should have sent some word. I do not know what things are coming to. Since his majesty's illness, no one seems to have any responsibility, or to take any."

"But of course he would have sent word," said Hedwig, frowning. "I don't understand it. He has never been so late before, has he?"

"He has never been late at all," Prince Ferdinand William Otto spoke up quickly.

"There He Is!" He Said.

After a time Hedwig went away, and the crown prince took off his riding clothes. He ate a very small luncheon, swallowing mostly a glass of milk and a lump in his throat. And afterward he worked at the frame, for an hour, shading the hearts carefully. At three o'clock he went for his drive.

The horses moved sedately. Beppo looked severe and haughty. A strange man, in the place of Hans, beside Beppo, watched the crowd with keen and vigilant eyes. On the box between them, under his hand, the new footman had placed a revolver. Beppo sat as far away from it as he dared. The crowd lined up, and smiled and cheered. And Prince Ferdinand William Otto sat very straight, and bowed right and left, smiling.

Old Adelbert, limping across the park to the opera, paused and looked. Then he shook his head. The country was indeed come to a strange pass, with only that boy and the feeble old king to stand between it and the things of which men whispered behind their hands. He went on, with his head down.

As they drew near the end of the park, where the land of desire towered, Prince Ferdinand William Otto searched it with eager eyes. How wonderful it was! How steep and high, and alluring! He glanced sideways at Miss Braithwaite, but it was clear that to her it was only a monstrous heap of sheet iron and steel, adorned with dejected greenery that had manifestly been out too soon in the chill air of very early spring.

A wonderful possibility presented itself. "If I see Bobby," he asked, "may I stop the carriage and speak to him?"

"Certainly not."

"Well, may I call to him?" "Think it over," suggested Miss Braithwaite. "Would your grandfather like to know that you had done anything so undignified?"

He turned to her a rather desperate pair of eyes. "But I could explain to him," he said. "I was in such a hurry when I left, that I'm afraid I forgot to thank him. I ought to thank him, really. He was very polite to me."

Miss Braithwaite sat still in her seat and said nothing, just then. But later on something occurred to her. "You must remember, Otto," she said, "that this—this American child dislikes kings, and our sort of government. It is possible, isn't it, that he would resent your being of the ruling family? Why not let things be as they are?"

"We were very friendly," said Ferdinand William Otto in a small voice. "I don't think it would make any difference."

But the seed was sown in the fertile ground of his young mind, to bear quick fruit.

It was the crown prince who saw Bobby first. He was standing on a bench, peering over the shoulders of the crowd. Prince Ferdinand William Otto saw him, and bent forward. "There he is!" he said, in a tense tone. "There on the—"

"Sit up straight," commanded Miss Braithwaite.

"May I just wave once? I—"

"Otto!" said Miss Braithwaite, in a terrible voice.

But a dreadful thing was happening. Bobby was looking directly at him, and unking no sign. His mouth was a trifle open, but that was all. Otto had a momentary glimpse of him, of the small cap set far back, of the white sweater, of two coolly critical eyes. Then the crowd closed up, and the carriage moved on.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto sat back in his seat, very pale. Clearly Bobby was through with him. First Nikky had forgotten him, and now the American boy had learned his unfortunate position as one of the detested order, and would have none of him.

"You see," said Miss Braithwaite, with an air of relief, "he did not know you."

Upon the box the man beside Beppo kept his hand on the revolver. The carriage turned back toward the palace.

Late that afternoon the chancellor had a visitor. Old Mathilde, his servant and housekeeper, showed some curiosity but little excitement over it. She was, in fact, faintly resentful. The chancellor had eaten little all day, and now, when she had an omelet ready to turn smoking out of the pan, must come the Princess Hedwig on foot like the common people, and demand to see him.

The chancellor was in his old smoking coat and slippers. He made an effort to don his tunic, but Hedwig, on Mathilde's heels, caught him in the net. And, after a glance at her face, he relinquished the idea, bowed over her hand, and drew up a chair for her.

And that was how the chancellor of the kingdom learned that Captain Larisch, aide-de-camp to his royal highness the crown prince, had disappeared.

"I am afraid it is serious," she said, watching him with wide, terrified eyes. "I know more than you think I do. I—we hear things, even in the palace." Irony here, but unconscious. "I know that there is trouble. And it is not like Captain Larisch to desert his post."

"A boyish escapade, highness," said the chancellor. But, in the twilight, he gripped hard at the arms of his chair. "He will turn up, very much ashamed of himself, tonight or tomorrow."

"That is what you want to believe. You know better."

He leaned back in his chair and considered her from under his heavy brows. Nikky gone, perhaps to join the others who, one by one, had felt the steel of the terrorists. And this girl, on whom so much hung, sitting there, a figure of young tragedy.

"Highness," he said at last, "if the worst has happened—and that I do not believe—it will be because there is trouble, as you have said. Sooner or later, we who love our country must make sacrifices for it. Most of all, those in high places will be called upon. And among them you may be asked to help."

"If? What can I do?" But she knew, and the chancellor saw that she knew.

"It is Karl, then?"

"It may be King Karl, Hedwig." Hedwig rose, and the chancellor got heavily to his feet. She was fighting for calmness, and she succeeded very well. After all, if Nikky were gone, what did it matter? Only—

"There are so many of you," she said, rather pitifully. "And you are all so powerful. And against you there is only me."

"Why against us, highness?"

"Because," said Hedwig—"because I care for some one else, and I shall care for him all the rest of my life, even if he never comes back. You may marry me to whom you please, but I shall go on caring. I shall never forget. And I shall make Karl the worst wife in the world, because I hate him."

She opened the door and went out without ceremony, because she was hard driven and on the edge of tears.

That night, the city was searched for Nikky Larisch, but without result.

CHAPTER VII.

Nikky Does a Reckless Thing. Nikky Larisch had been having an exciting time.

First of all, he exchanged garments with the chauffeur, and cursed his own long legs, which proved difficult to cover adequately. But the chauffeur's long fur ulster helped considerably. The exchange was rather a ticklish matter, and would have been more so had he not found a revolver in the fur coat pocket.

Behold, then, Nikky of the brave heart standing over his prostrate prisoner, and rolling him, unmanly fashion, in his own tunic and a rug from the machine.

"It is cold, my friend," he said briefly; "but I am a kindly soul, and if you have told me the truth, you will not have so much as a snuffle to remind you of this tomorrow."

"I have told the truth." "As a soldier, of course," Nikky went on. "I think you have made a mistake. You should have chosen the precept. But as a private gentleman, I thank you."

Having examined the knots in the rope, which were very well done, indeed, and having gagged the chauffeur securely, Nikky prepared to go. In his goggles, with the low-voiced cap and fur coat, he looked not unlike his late companion. But he had a jaunty step as he walked toward the car, a bit of swagger that covered, perhaps, just a trifle of uneasiness.

For Nikky now knew his destination, knew that he was bound on perilous work, and that the chances of his returning were about fifty-fifty, or rather less.

He did not know his way. Over the mountains it was plain enough, for there was but one road. After he descended into the plain of Karnia, however, it became difficult. Sign posts were few and not explicit. But at last he found the railroad, which he knew well—that railroad without objective, save as it would serve to move troops toward the border. After that Nikky found it easier.

But, with his course assured, other difficulties presented themselves. To take the letter to those who would receive it was one thing. But to deliver it with all that it might contain, was another. He was not brilliant, was Nikky. Only brave and simple of heart, and unversed in the ways of darkness.

If, now, he could open the letter and remove it, substituting—well, what could he substitute? There were cigarette papers in his pocket. Trust Nikky for that. But how to make the exchange?

The engine was hollering hard, a dull roaring under the hood that threatened trouble. He drew up beside the road and took off the water cap. Then he whistled. Why, of course! Had it not been done from time immemorial, this stinging of letters? He examined it. It bore no incriminating sign.

He held the envelope over the water cap, and was boyishly pleased to feel the flap loosen. After all, things were easy enough if one used one's brains. He rather regretted using almost all of his cigarette papers, of course. He had, perhaps, never heard of the drop of nicotine on the tongue of a dog.

As for the letter itself, he put it, without even glancing at it, into his cap, under the lining. Then he sealed the envelope again and dried it against one of the humps. It looked, he reflected, as good as new.

He was extremely pleased with himself.

Before he returned to the machine he consulted his watch. It was three o'clock. True, the long early spring night gave him four more hours of darkness. But the messenger was due at three, at the hunting lodge in the mountains which was his destination. He would be, at the best, late by an hour.

On what the messenger had told him Nikky hung his hope of success. This was, briefly, that he should go to the royal shooting box at Weddell, and should go, not to the house itself, but to the gate keeper's lodge. Here he was to leave his machine, and tap at the door. On its being opened, he was to say nothing, but to give the letter to him who opened the door. After that he was to take the machine away to the capital, some sixty miles farther on.

The message, then, was to the king himself. For Nikky, as all the world knew that Karl, with some kindred spirits, was at Weddell, shooting. That is, if the messenger told the truth. Nikky intended to find out. He was nothing if not thorough.

When at last the lights of the lodge at the gate of Weddell gleamed out through the trees, it was half-past three, and a wet spring snow was falling softly. In an open place Nikky looked up. The stars were gone.

The lodge now, and the gate keeper's house. Nikky's heart hammered as he left the car—hammered with nervousness, not terror. But he went boldly to the door, and knocked.

So far all was well. There were footsteps within, and a man stepped out into the darkness, closing the door behind him.

"You have the letter?" he asked.

"It is here."

"I will take it."

Nikky held it out. The man fumbled for it. Took it.

"Orders have come," said the voice, "that you remain here for the night. In the morning you are to carry dispatches to the city."

Poor Nikky! With his car facing toward the lodge, and under necessity, in order to escape, to back it out into the highway! He thought quickly. There was no chance of overpowering his man quickly and silently. And the house was not empty. From beyond the door came the sounds of men's voices, and the thud of drinking mugs on a bare table.

"You will take me up to the house, and then put the car away until morning."

Nikky breathed again. It was going to be easy, after all. If only the road went straight to the shooting box itself, the rest was simple. But he prayed that he make no false turning, to betray his ignorance.

"Very well," he said.

His companion opened the door behind him. "Ready, now," he called.

"The car is here."

Two men rose from a table where they had been sitting, and went quivered in the wind from the open door. Nikky was quite calm now. His heart beat its regular seventy-two, and he even reflected, with a sort of grim humor, that the chancellor would find the recital of this escapade much to his taste. In a modest way Nikky felt that he was making history.

The man who had received the letter got into the machine beside him. The other two climbed into the tonneau. And, as if to make the denouement doubly ridiculous, the road led straight. Nikky, growing extremely

With a masterly sweep, Nikky drew up his machine before the entrance. Let them once alight, let him but start his car down the road again, and all the devils of the night might follow. He feared nothing.

But here again Nikky planned too fast. The servant who came out to open the doors of the motor had brought a message. "His majesty desires that the messenger come in," was the bomb-shell which exploded in Nikky's ears.

Nikky hesitated. And then some imp of recklessness in him prompted him not to run away, but to see the thing through. It was, after all, a chance either way. These men beside the car were doubtless armed—one at least, nearest him, was certainly one of Karl's own secret agents. And, as Nikky surmised, he was not certain, but

"Conscription of Men, Conscription of Money," Analyzed.

By OTTO H. KAHN.

Much is being said about the plausible sounding contention that because a certain portion of the young manhood of the nation has been conscripted, therefore money must also be conscripted. Why, that is the very thing the government has been doing. It has conscripted a portion—a relatively small portion—of the men of the nation. It has conscripted a portion—a large portion—of the incomes of the nation. Capital and business pay more than four-fifths of our total war taxation directly and a large share of the remaining fifth indirectly.

If the government went too far in conscripting men the country would be crippled. If it went too far in conscripting incomes and earnings the country would likewise be crippled.

Results of Conscription of Capital.

I would ask those who would go further and conscript not only incomes, but capital, to answer the riddle, not only in what equitable and practicable manner they would do it, but what the nation would gain by it?

It is true that a few years ago a capital levy was made in Germany, but the percentage of that levy was so small as to actually amount to no more than an additional income tax and that at a time when the regular income tax in Germany was very moderate as measured by the present standards of income taxation.

Only a trifling fraction of a man's property is held in cash. If they conscript a certain percentage of his possessions in stocks and bonds, what would the government do with them?

Keep them? That would not answer its purpose, because the government wants cash, not securities.

Sell them? Who is to buy them when every one's funds would be depleted?

If they conscript a certain percentage of a man's real estate or mine or factory, how is that to be expressed and converted into cash?

Are conscripted assets to be used as a basis for the issue of Federal Reserve bank notes? That would mean gross inflation, with all its attendant evils, dangers and deceptions.

Would they repudiate a percentage of the national debt? Repudiation is no less dishonorable in a people than in an individual, and the penalty for failure to respect the sanctity of obligations is no different.

The Thrifty Would Be Penalized.

The fact is that the government would gain nothing in the process of capital conscription and the country would be thrown into chaos for the time being. The man who has saved would be penalized, he who has wasted would be favored. Thrift and constructive effort, resulting in the needful and fruitfulness of accumulation of capital would be arrested and lastingly discouraged.

I can understand the crude notion of the man who would divide all possessions equally. There would be mighty little coming to any one by such distribution, and it is, of course, an utterly impossible thing to do, but it is an understandable notion. But by the confiscation of capital for government use neither the government nor any individual would be benefited.

A vigorously progressive income tax is both economically and socially sound. A capital tax is wholly unsound and economically destructive.

It may nevertheless become necessary in the case of some of the belligerent countries to resort to this expedient, but I can conceive of no situation likely to arise which would make it necessary or advisable in this country.

More than ever would such a tax be harmful in times of war and post-war reconstruction, when beyond almost all other things it is essential to stimulate production and promote thrift, and when everything which tends to have the opposite effect should be rigorously rejected as detrimental to the nation's strength and well-being.

There is an astonishing lot of hazy thinking on the subject of the uses of capital in the hands of its owners.

The rich man can spend only a relatively small sum of money unproductively or selfishly. The money that it is in his power actually to waste is exceedingly limited. The bulk of what he has must be spent and used for productive purposes, just as would be the case if it were spent by the government, with this difference, however, that, generally speaking, the individual is more painstaking and discriminating in the use of his funds and at the same time bolder, more imaginative, enterprising and constructive than the government with its necessarily bureaucratic and routine regime possibly could be. Money in the hands of the individual is continuously and feverishly on the search for opportunities—i. e., for creative and productive use. In the hands of the government it is apt to lose a good deal of its fruitfulness and ceaseless striving and to sink instead into placid and somnolent repose.

There need not be and there should not be any conflict, between profits and patriotism. I am utterly opposed to those who would utilize their country's war as a means to enrich themselves. The "war profiteer," as the term is generally understood, is a public nuisance and an ignominy. Extortionate profits must not be tolerated, but, on the other hand, there should be a reasonably liberal disposition toward business and a willingness to see it make substantial earnings.

For, taxation presupposes earnings. Our credit structure is based upon values, and values are largely determined by earnings. Shrinkage of values necessarily affects our capacity to provide the government with the sinews of war.

The Conscription of Men.

Reverting now to the subject of the conscription of men, I know I speak the sentiment of all those beyond the years of young manhood when I say that there is not one of us worthy of the name of a man who would not willingly go to fight if the country needed or wanted us to fight. But the country does not want or call its entire manhood to fight. It does not even call anywhere near its entire young manhood. It has called or intends to call in the immediate future perhaps 25 per cent. of its men between twenty and thirty years of age, which means probably about 4 per cent. of its total male population of all ages. But it has called from incomes, business profits and other imposts falling principally on the well to do, approximately ninety per cent. of our war taxation, not to mention the contributions to the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A. and other war relief activities.

Let me add in passing that the children of the well to do have been taken for the war in proportionately greater numbers than the children of the poor, because those young men who are needed at home to support dependents or to maintain essential war industries are exempted from the draft.

Our Laws Favor Sons of the Poor.

The draft exemption regulations discriminate not, as in former wars, in favor of the rich man's son, but in favor of the poor man's son.

I realize but too well that the burden of the abnormally high cost of living, caused largely by the war, weighs heavily indeed upon wage earners and still more upon men and women with moderate salaries. I yield to no one in my desire to see everything done that is practicable to have that burden lightened. But excessive taxation on capital will not accomplish that; on the contrary, it will tend to intensify the trouble.

Taxation must be sound and wise and scientific and cannot be laid in a haphazard way or on impulse or according to considerations of politics, otherwise the whole country will suffer. History has shown over and over again that the laws of economics cannot be defied with impunity and that the resulting penalty falls upon all sections and classes.

The question of the individual is not the one that counts. The question is not what sacrifices capital should and would be willing to bear if called upon, but what taxes it is to the public advantage to impose.

I do not say all this to plead for a reduction of the taxation on wealth or in order to urge that no additional taxes be imposed on wealth if need be. There is no limit to the burden which in time of stress and strain those must be willing to bear who can afford it except only that limit which is imposed by the consideration that taxation must not reach a point where the business activity of the country becomes crippled and its economic equilibrium is thrown out of gear, because that would harm every element of the commonwealth and diminish the war-making capacity of the nation.

PATRICK HENRY'S FAMOUS ADDRESS NOW APPLICABLE

Liberty or Death, Issue in War of Revolution, Is Issue in the Great World War.

One hundred and forty-three years ago in the Provincial Convention at Richmond, Va., Patrick Henry, patriot to the last drop of his heart's blood, flung into the faces of his wavering fellow delegates his now world-famous call to arms.

"Mr. President," he cried, "if we mean to preserve inviolate those inestimable privileges for which we have been so long contending; if we mean not basely to abandon the noble struggle in which we have been so long engaged and which we have pledged ourselves never to abandon until the glorious object of our contest shall be attained, we must fight!"

"Our brethren are already in the field! Why stand we here idle? What is it that gentlemen wish? What would they have? Is life so dear or peace so sweet as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty or give me death!"

There spoke a patriot true. And he won his fight. Liberty's struggle was long and trying, but victory came at last. And the shield of freedom, blazoned upon the doorways of a new nation, has grown brighter and more resplendent with the passing of the years, until it stands today an inspiration for all the world.

Yet over yonder across the sea the mailed fist of Prussian autocracy is raised in menace. Its shadow is growing smaller, but it is a shadow still. It has lost some of its power, but the will to strike is yet there. And all those "inestimable privileges" of which Patrick Henry spoke are threatened and will continue so to be until Prussianism is crushed utterly.

"Our brethren are already in the field! Why stand we here idle?" Think but a moment on stricken France, on pillaged Belgium, on outraged Serbia, on every land upon which the polluting hand of the Hun has fallen, and fancy what our portion will be if that same mailed fist is loosed upon our shores.

Then loosen your purse strings. Buy Liberty Bonds.

Patrick Henry was right. Death would be immeasurably preferable.

THE FARM AND THE NATION

Agriculturists Must Do Their Bit and Help Win World War.

Every now and then, in driving through the country, one sees a particularly well kept farm. Everything is in shape and everything indicates prosperity. The farm is a success.

What is the secret of this? It is that everybody on the place is a busy man, helping himself and helping the others. All work and all work together. No matter what the weather, no matter what attacks the crops, no matter what the market, the business prospers.

This country is engaged in a big war. Now is the time for everybody to work and work hard and help himself and others. The best way to help, if one is not at the front fighting, is to help finance the undertaking. We can't fall if we are at home doing our share when we have men at the front making the supreme sacrifice.

Buy Liberty Loan Bonds.

WHAT YOUR BOND WILL DO

The farmer who purchases a $1,000 Liberty Bond need not think he has not done anything toward directly providing the War Department with the means to defeat the Kaiser and his armies. When the War Department gets $1,000 it has the funds wherewith to equip 25 soldiers and furnish them with two rifles each. These 25 men may, by holding a shell hole or a section of a trench, decide a battle that will decide this war in our favor.

A FORMER CRISIS IN U. S. HISTORY URGES BOND SALE

During Civil War Need Was Great,
but Financial System Did Not Equal Present.

By William Chauncey Langdon.

L. E. Chittenden, Lincoln's Register of the Treasury, tells in this "Personal Recollections of President Lincoln" of the anonymous Englishman who came forward in 1862 to lend the United States $5,000,000, and the herculean efforts made to repay him.

British shipbuilders were constructing two armored vessels for the Confederacy. Our Minister, Charles Francis Adams, secured the issue of a restraining order just in time, but it could not be enforced until damages had been secured by the deposit of $5,000,000 sterling in gold coin, with gold at 160. Where could he get it?

There was no trans-Atlantic cable then. "When he had given up all hope of arresting these vessels, a quiet gentleman called upon him and asked if he might be favored with the opportunity of making the deposit of coin required by the order." The only condition was that his name should not be made known.

In this war many Englishmen—and others—whose names we do not know have supplied us with money or its value—with munitions, and men, and safety, and immunity from German attack.

To this, our blood-bought benefit, hundreds of thousands of anonymous Englishmen and Frenchmen and Italians and Belgians have contributed.

Shall we not repay them promptly in kind by coming to their aid with money and munitions and ships and men, to the safety from German fury of those who remain, or of their widows and children?

This will cost? Will YOU help? How much? How soon? Buy a Liberty Bond and thus pay a little toward the freedom you have enjoyed thus far, as well as contribute toward the insuring of a like freedom and, we trust, of an even greater liberty for all in the years to come!

NO NEW AUTO—BUYS BONDS

Liberty Loan Speaker Enlists Assembly of Missouri Dentists.

Dr. Val Kunz, a dentist, of 3258 South Jefferson avenue, is going to rattle along in his old automobile for another season, at least.

The doctor hadn't intended to. In fact, he had all but closed a deal that would have given him a much better machine in exchange for his old one and $1,000 "boot."

But just at this point Dr. Kunz attended a meeting of the St. Louis Dental Society at the St. Louis Club. Among the speakers at that meeting was Thomas Q. Dix, a speaker for the Liberty Loan Organization of the Eighth Federal Reserve District, which is backing the Third Liberty Loan drive.

Dr. Dix brought home to the assembled dentists the importance of the success of the loan in a manner that "raised 'em from their chairs."

Early next morning Dr. Kunz got the other man in the automobile trade on the phone.

"It's all off," said Kunz.

"Why—what you mean?" asked the astonished trader.

"I heard a Liberty Loan speaker last night," said Dr. Kunz. "And I've just concluded that Uncle Sam needs my dollars more than I need another automobile. I bought a few hundred dollars' worth of the other loans. I thought I was doing my full duty. I thought I was a sacrificing American. Then I forgot all about it."

"Henceforth I'm eating, sleeping and living this war! I've been a slacker, in so far as making the sacrifices that an American should make in this cause. That deal is off. My $1,000 and every other dollar I can spare goes into Liberty Bonds. Good-bye."

MONEY AND FOOD WANTED

Dollars Are Only Bullets That Never Miss Mark, He Says in Urging a Vigorous Loan Campaign.

By Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang,
The Archbishop of York and Primate of England.

"Come to England and France quickly with money, ships and food. There is a terrible strain upon my countrymen in the trenches. We are not whining and asking for sympathy, but you will be cheering us to new hope, if we know that all the power and resources of your country will be given to the future of civilization."

"You cannot send as many men as you wish, but you can send other things. Send money. Where men cannot go, money can. The ocean cannot stop it. Your dollars are the only bullets that will never miss their mark. You are going to have a great Liberty Loan soon. Put all the vigor into it that you can. Don't delay. We are asking you as brothers and partners, to come and help us. Every man, woman and child can help in this fight to free the world from the menace of German domination."

"We have to settle whether the spirit of irresponsible autocracy or the spirit of freedom is to prevail among the nations of the world. So vast and fundamental an issue naturally draws all the free nations of the world together. It must be settled now and forever, cost what it may. The world must decide whether it will submit to the domination of a spirit which, if it were to prevail, would plunge the nations of the world into a long, restless career of military rivalry. On such an issue there can be no such thing as compromise. We must be worthy of our task. We must recover for the world the atmosphere of freedom."

Following his address at a banquet given by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, the Archbishop of York authorized the above message to the American people.

His Grace, the Most Rev. Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of York and Primate of England, is the highest prelate in the Church of England save one. The Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of All England, is the ranking archbishop of the Church of England. The office of Primate of England was created in the year A. D. 627. This ancient and honorable office and title has been held by many distinguished prelates. Dr. Lang is the ninety-eighth Archbishop of York and Primate of England. The office of Primate of All England was created in the year A. D. 597.

The difference between the office of Primate of All England and the Primate of England is slight. Centuries ago, to keep peace between two archbishops and primates, the added words "of all" to the title of the Primate of England solved the problem. The Archbishop of York not only is one of the heads of the Church of England, but is a member of the House of Lords. A member of the House of Lords owes no allegiance to any political party and therefore his actions as a statesman are not curbed or influenced. He represents the government and the people with equal interest and frequently fights the battles in Parliament of the laboring classes.

Dr. Lang is a Scotchman, the son of a Presbyterian minister, but he joined the Church of England early in life and while a youth began to study for the ministry. He rose from the rectory of a small church when yet a young man and before he had attained the age of 60 was named Archbishop of York and Primate of England. He soon distinguished himself not only as a prelate but as a fearless and brilliant statesman and champion of the people in the House of Lords.

The Archbishop has visited many cities in the United States recently, where he delivered addresses before chambers of commerce and other civic organizations. He brings not only a message of brotherhood and appreciation from Great Britain, but he emphasizes the need for undivided support of the government of the United States by the people if the war is to be won. He pleads for a speeding up of shipbuilding, of money raising and of troop mobilization. Dr. Lang makes

BOND INVESTORS INCREASE BECAUSE OF LIBERTY BONDS

Sixteen Millions Expected to Participate in Third Liberty Loan.

More than 15,000,000 persons are expected to subscribe to the Third Liberty Loan. Four million subscribed to the first issue and about 11,000,000 to the second loan.

Sixteen million buttons for subscribers have been ordered by treasury officials for the Third Liberty Loan. The system of honor rolls in each municipality, community or business organization, bearing the names of subscribers, and of honor flags, to be given to each city exceeding its quota, is expected to stimulate the number of subscriptions. This plan will disclose who subscribes and who refuses to buy.

Extensive preparations have been made for advertising the Third Liberty Bond campaign. Requests have been received from hundreds of newspapers publishing Sunday editions for 10,000,000 inserts showing the honor flag in colors, to be distributed April 7. Two hundred foreign-language newspapers have requested supplies of poster supplements.

A special train carrying French war relics, accompanied by Liberty Loan speakers and wounded French soldiers, will travel through the South and Southwest and perhaps elsewhere. The relics, which include some of the small guns, German helmets and other trophies, and Red Cross exhibits, recently were sent to the United States by the French government to assist in the bond campaign. The train will be sent through the St. Louis, Dallas and Atlantic federal reserve districts, starting April 6.

A LIBERTY LOAN PRAYER

St. Louis Minister Composes
Appeal on Eve of His Departure For France.

Less than a week before he sailed for France in the service of the Y. M. C. A., Rev. Elmer T. Clark, Litt. D., former minister of the Shaw Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and former secretary of the St. Louis Ministerial Alliance, prepared the following prayer for the Third Liberty Loan for use on Liberty Loan Sunday, April 7th:

"Oh God, who dost ever guide the tread of the nation, born to serve mankind with an exalted unselfishness, bless all our people and their representatives in authority. In this time of crisis and judgment, inspire us to think, act and serve together in the common cause of a victorious righteousness. Touch our souls with a high sense of patriotic sacrifice. Consecrate our means as well as our men."

"Bless, we beseech Thee, the Third Liberty Loan with the benediction of Thy benignant favor. May no act or word from us impede its sanctified will. And arouse our enthusiasm to see it through to a most successful conclusion. Amen."

BUSINESS CONCERNS TABBED

Credit Men Keep Uncle Sam Posted on Ability to Buy.

Liberty Bond slackers among business houses throughout the nation are being revealed by credit men whose duty it is to analyze the financial statements of firms in all classes of trade.

Preliminary investigations of expert credit men in checking up the financial statements of many concerns in various businesses in all parts of the United States find that the percentage of Liberty Bonds of the first and second issues among their assets was startlingly small.

It has been suggested that banking institutions would be justified in bringing to the attention of their customers, particularly those who are borrowers, the necessity for these patriotic investments being made in reasonable proportions.

Credit men have undertaken to bring to the attention of the public the lukewarmness of many business houses in backing the government in its prosecution of the war. The government is in the war, business not only to destroy Prussian autocracy but every vestige of disloyalty and opposition to the battle for world liberty.

It is clear that the people of England are in dire need of food and that the man power of the nation is waning.

A member of the Archbishop's party said the distinguished Britons were surprised and delighted with the enthusiasm of the American people to support the war. He said Americans have come to a realization of what the threat of German domination means to the world, and especially to America. He explained that many persons in Great Britain were slow to realize the necessity for shedding their blood upon the battlefields of France to halt the Hun.

HUMANITY

and FALL PIGS

HERBERT HOOVER says that the American pork producer holds the destiny of democracy in the palm of his hand.

FOOD for human consumption is the key that will unlock the portals of everlasting peace; it is the lever that will pry the yoke of autocracy from the face of the earth.

Pork, with wheat, is the basis of human rations. Without these no progress could be made in making the world safe for democracy. The American farmer will produce these foods and will produce them in sufficient amounts to blot out the curse of militarism.

Fall pigs this year will aid. Never was there equal opportunity for profit in fall pigs; never before and possibly never again will any single crop be of as great worth to the producer, to the nation—to humanity itself—as will the crop of fall pigs produced in 1918.
